and this refusal raised him in public estimation. It is to be regretted that he has deserted us, and that while it is perfectly evident, he would have made himself useful to the country. By accepting office in the present Cabinet, he has, whose policy he denounced, and thereby forfeited all claims on the score of political independence, and must be held responsible for their past political sins,—sins which are yet unrepented and unconfessed.

Mr. BROOKMAN, the member of the Conservative party, has said that any one would think of inviting into a government taking the most charitable view, those who are most predictable, and who are most predictable, visionary,—as crazed with his anti-British idea of an American nation, which is little better than America itself, delivered at the opposition demonstration in Toronto last evening, the less organized and less popular it appears to be. A man of much less of the debt of the Province than the mass of the debt of Hamilton. This is not the main strength of his case, but it is a dead weight to sink it lower in public estimation.

Then what about Mr. FOLEY? We are told that he is a man of great tact, and of great worth, and one in whom the party should repose every confidence. Once Mr. Foley was considered a safe bet, but it is to be said that he is not.—Ours bear the most unmistakable signs and characteristics which belong to the old Coalition. This is, at least, a conclusion, because it will remove any doubts which might have left, had there been any vision between the two rival parties now in the House. It is in every sense a strict party government, constituted entirely out of the ranks of the late Opposition, and contains not a single man whom the great Liberal party would elect or have confidence in as a leader. That will be seen at a glance, by analyzing the personnel of the new Cabinet.

Constituting with the Premier, Sir E. P. Tamm, who was formerly in the Cabinet with Carter and Macdonald, and whose party principles are so strong that he refused to act with a liberal and moderate politician, like the Hon. Mr. Ferguson Blair, who in short is so vociferously illiberal that he would not co-operate with the Upper Canada majority, and would not consent to govern the Province on any other terms than through and by a dominant majority from Lower Canada. Before this exhibition of sectional jealousy and bigotry, he might have succeeded in securing toleration from this section of the Province, but he has lost all chance of doing so, but the most uncompromising hostility of all, but the blindest of political partisans.

Next is Mr. CARTER, who after all is the body and soul of the new Ministry, with the gallant and superannuated Knight as a mere figure-head. It is unnecessary to do more than to mention the name of the Premier of the old corrupt coalition—the arch enemy of everything Upper Canadian—in order to secure at once an overwhelming verdict against the new order of things, from this section of the Province. So strong is the feeling known to be against him, that he was obliged to abdicate the functions which belonged to him as leader of the Opposition, and nominally give up his place to another supposed to be less obnoxious, whose merits, he trusted, would be sufficient to cover his political sins, and protect him from public indignation.—Now we will speak of the artful and devious hopes still to show.

The next in order is Mr. GALT, as Minister of Finance, called to repeat the gigantic extravagances and blunders of his previous administration, and in spending five hundred millions per annum more than the public revenue. Those who are dazed and captured by such brilliant exploits will rejoice at Mr. Galt's return to power. Whoa who the more honest common sense and prudent method of expending less, instead of more than the income, will view the matter with different feelings?

Mr. CHAPMAN is unknown to public fame, further than as a member of the House, he was always found voting with Carter, Galt, & Co., against the MacDonald-Dorion Government.

From.—On Friday evening last, a fire was burned in a barn owned by Mr. Thompson, of the town, and situated on the property of Mr. Thompson, a farm owner and party teacher like him. He has shown himself to be more devoted to office than to principle or party, and has given up his schoolroom to popular favor.

He certainly brings with him neither strength nor character to the cabinet, and if he has been elected, we will soon find that he is a sort of political Jonah, and will be thrown overboard by his own colleagues.

Mr. SIRKES, of Niagara, has no doubt been appointed, because it was thought that he would bring with him some reason for supporting the same party government.

The McDonald-Dorion Administration tendered in another column, announcing that the "Willard House" has charged bands, and is to receive them in the future.

As it has been reflected in the paper, it is to be had gratis, in the same style as the old Washington House.

THE HASTINGS CHRONICLE.

The Eaves-Dropping Opposition,
Oh, I grieve when I think of the sorry condition
Of His Majesty's Royal Loyal Opposition.
With their eaves-dropping still, in their eaves-dropping
From Carter the leader, to such caught McMen,
These Jealous Daddlers, and such snarlers and stealers,
At the strings of the pores are still trying to pull,
And would sell their small souls for a bell-jewel—
(Bell-jewel).

The dog of war, the growling John A.,
The hound which has well nigh had his day;
And Blarney the Braggart, and "patriot" strong,
Has been all things by turns, and still nothing long.
They are winking, and cooing, and whining and pulling,
And would sell their small souls for a bell-jewel—
(Bell-jewel).

The dog of war, the growling John A.,
But to morals and manners 'twould be a disgrace
If such ready snarlers should founder to pull (piano).
Then take all, good people, before it's too late;
If these hounds come round you, look on for you.

And lose not the sight of the growling hounds,
If you give them a meal, they'll be hounding you.
If you joke at dinner, the joke is revealed,
Is it moral—the contact concealed,
For their purpose they still find some vagabond thing,
A lucky hound to follow like King.

Toronto, March 7th, 1864. FORGOTTEN.

A. WARD RELATES AN INCIDENT.

I must relate a little incident which happened to your humble servant on his return home from the city of Boston, where he had been in the street, looking as galant and gay in my braided coat and blue buttons, and other military bairnes, when a excited female rushed out of a house, threw'd her pug hand over my neck—which part I don't mind much as the was fair, round nose and一切 closed.

"Do I behold thee once again?"
"You do—and I think you are holdin' me too fasty," said I, trying to release the captive female's arm.

"O! you can't turn back—have you emm back? or why wildly, hangin' lighter to me."

"Certainly I've com back," said I; "or else I don't have. But I don't think I know you much."

Then I saw your own Charita Rosetta Bullets—who has not yet had eyes one you for more than 2 years! Yes, she continued plasin' her hands onto my shoulders and lookin' up to me face like a dyin' homy fit; I see mi own Alfrid's eyes, his nose, his ears, his mouth, his hair, his teeth, his skin, his madam, etc.

"Madam," said I, "excuse me, but I am to correct you. If I am not mistaken—these ears, and eyes, and nose belong to myself individually, and your Alfrid never owned them, scarceyly."

"Away with this farce," said she, "you can't deserve your own Charita. Can into the house and see your little son, Lincoln Burnside McMillan Beaser."

It was evident that the female was mistaken—it was not me but another man she wanted.

"How old is he? 7?"

"Which? Seven?"

"Them little son, Lincoln Burnside McMillan and 4th?"

"He's just six months old—the darling."

"Well, madam," said I, "of little Lincoln McMillan and 4th, it is only 6 months old, and you have's not eyes onto your Alfrid for more'n 2 years, I think there is a mistake somewhere, and that is not your Alfrid but another man above."

The woman shot into the house like 40, and that was the last I saw of her, but I pity Alfrid.

Hints to Clerks and Apprentices.

1. Let not your service be eye service.
2. Learn your trade now; you can't afford to wait for an apprenticeship to yourself afterwards.

3. Whatever be your salary, be worth more than double.

4. Let no work be menial to you, it does well and you will soon be put to better.

5. Your employer's interests are yours, promote them to promote your own.

6. Never be idle, there is always plenty to do if you could but see it.

7. Wear an eternal warfare against bad sleeping, slovenly habits, and dust.

8. Remember that a well-kept stock costs you no employer's interest.

9. Clean all works before they are received or delivered.

10. Your nephews will in the end all come out of your own wages.

11. Make yourself a economy.

12. Never borrow even a cent from the till.

13. Keep honourably the trade secrets of your house.—Mercantileman.

MERCANTILE MAXIMS.

Never buy an unuseable article because it is cheap.

Buy too little rather than too much.

Don't bate about prices.

Visit the market personally when you can.

Be careful but quick in your decisions.

Low priced goods are not always the best stock.

Keep your chief list in your head.

When ordering goods be explicit.

Never do business for the name of it.

Be courteous; it costs nothing and pays well.

Judicious publicity without puffing is good.

Don't make false transactions.

Don't hold bad stock.

Be satisfied with moderate things.

Don't take long credits—10%.

HINTS TO EMPLOYERS.

1. Teach your apprentices in your trade;

not their proficiency is your profit!

2. Be strict but kind to all in your employ.

3. Be slow to appreciate a merit.

4. When you want "blow up" don't do it so far as to publicize it.

5. What you serve is the cheapest in the end.

6. Take a personal interest in all whom you employ.

7. Set an example of honesty, if you expect it to be practiced.

8. Train your workmen who wished to have been treated with a considerate holiday.

10. Be not a hard taskmaster.

11. Give a well-tried and faithful man a chance if you can.

12. Keep none in your employment in whom you can't put confidence—10%.

The Florence Nightingale of the Nurses.

The following is a copy of a letter written by Mrs. C. E. Werner, to the American Friends of the Poor, at New York:

BUENAPATRESS.—
Just open the door for her, and Mrs. Wm. will prove to you that she is the "Florence Nightingale" of the Nurses. If this we do so well, that we do not let her go, we shall be helping her to survive and escape the prison—helping and teaching her. We could not possibly let it proceed otherwise, every part of us would be against it.

Pray, if there is any one who wants to help us, to come and speak to me. I am a simple woman, and have no money, but I have a heart full of love for the poor.

THE HASTINGS CHRONICLE.

For the Hastings Chronicle.
Lines on the death of Alvin H. Bush.

She is gone—my sweet no more;
Has fled from my sight so soon!
Why was it, my life's light?
She is gone—nearer the lips of truth
Can present me with a few,
Great proofs of love and hope;
Ah! now I long for her!

She's gone—my sweet no more;
Few were her wedded months and mine.
Those happy days, those fond words can bring Back when sleep has fled,

No, she's sleeping in my name,
She's sleeping with the dead.

She is gone—my lovely partner.

Will share my joys no more;

Our home is empty, our hearts are sad.

Can't happiness any more?

She's from all temptations free.

From all care and trouble free.

The blue, the joys of heaven,

Forever will she have.

She's gone—the charmer of my life.

Sweet will be the days in yester straits,

And wait for me above.

Youth, virtue, beauty, love and song—

That can fill her place to me!

Who else answers—who!

She's gone—the silent mother,

She's gone—the wife, the mother.

There is a noble little boy.

She left to cheer my way.

My heart is full of pain, but near

Me and my little band.

Until we all shall meet at last

With the angels in the sky.

She's gone—such reason to grieve.

No more her smile, no more my home,

New day, new joy, new bright.

Her smile, her song delights me now.

Two men she loved to please;

But God has given her the heart,

That gives me no rest.

But why should mortal man repine?

Or censure God's ways?

He loves her best, and called her home

That we may, we may murmur more.

Though hard the blow be given,

But strive to live on that we

May meet at last in heaven.

I. R. BUSH.

"THRIT ON IT."

A good story has been told of a lipping officer in the army, having been victimized by a brother officer (noted for his cool deliberation) who, in his turn, had his gun square with him in the following manner:

"The cool joker, the Captain, was always quizzing the lipping officer, a Lieutenant, for his nervousness."

"Why," said he one day, in the presence of his company, "nervousness is all nonsense, you know, Lieutenant, no brave man will be afraid."

"Well," enquired his lipping friend, "how would you do, those a shell with an inch foth that would drop itself into a wall'd angle, in which you had taken shelter from a crowd of sharp thoothers, and where it was plain that if you put out your both, you get peppered?"

"How," said the captain, "take it cool and spit on the fute."

The party broke up and all retired except the patrol. The next morning a number of officers were gathered in the parade and taking a lesson, when along came the lipping Lieutenant. Early opening his eyes, he remarked:

"I want to try an experiment this morning, and then how exceedingly cool you can be!"

He then walked deliberately into the Captain's room, and, after a fife burning on the earth, and pistol in his hottest centre a powder canister, instantly exploded. There was but one mode of egress from the quarters, and that was upon the ground, the road being open for defense; the occupant took one look at the Lieutenant, comprehended the situation, and in a moment darted at the door, but it was fastened on the outside.

"Charley, let me out if you love me," shouted the Captain.

"Tipto the canister!" shouted he in a hoarse whisper.

A moment was to be lost. He had at first caught up a blanket to cover his eyes, but now dropping it, he raised the window and out he bounded, sans culottes, saving everything but a very short under-dress, and he landed upon a parade ground. The shout which raised him to the air, the whole barracks to see what was the matter, and the dignified Captain pulled a Sergeant in front of him to hide himself.

"Why didn't you spit on it?" said the Lieutenant.

"Because there were no sharp shooters in front to stop a retreat," answered the Captain.

"All I can say to you, then," said his Captain, "is that you might have done it; for I'll tell you, there wasn't a single grain of powder in it."

The Captain has never spoken of persons since.

Now on the road to Egypt a somewhat ed youth, on the top of a drap, evidently ambitious of being mimicked for an officer, then saluted a fat coachman, who was gravely driving his master and family: "Sir, your air, where's your shire's coat-scarf? How dare a young come to the Derby without a shire-coat?"

Job growth forth, without lifting his eyes from the horses—

"Ow the dooce could I when your mom that has not sent home my washin?"

TODAY.—"A desire is excited," says Dr. Bush, "by tobacco for strong drags, and less to drunkenness." "Chewing tobacco," says Dr. Stephenson, "exhausts the salivary glands, weakens dryness and thirst."—Hence, after the use of a cigar and the quick, brandy, whisky or some other spirit is called for." Dr. Wood says: "I have supposed that tobacco was a great conductor, drawing all, and will improve the hand for several days."

"Smoking," says Dr. Munn, "produces a huskiness of the mouth, which calls for some liquid: hence the kindred habit of smoking and drinking." Hosts of others, whose word should be law, proclaim the same doctrine.

"When I goes a shopping," said old Ed'p, "I goes for what I wants, and if they have it, an it's available, I feel inclined to take it, and it's cheap, and it can't be got at any place for less. I always take it, without shaffing about it all day, as most people do."

HUSBAND.—"My dear, it's impossible, I can't afford to let you go to Saratoga this year, owing to the tightness of the money market."—"Can't afford it?"—"No, but you have your store down, after having effected a home insurance, or become bankrupt and made your interests at once?" You'd be able to afford it then!"
